ABOUT CONFERENCE

The World Summit on Pediatrics, Neonatology & Maternal Health 2026 is a prestigious global gathering dedicated to advancing science, clinical practice, and innovation in maternal and child healthcare. Set to take place on November 12-13, 2026 | Bangkok, Thailand, the summit will bring together leading paediatricians, neonatologists, obstetricians, maternal-fetal specialists, nurses, researchers, educators, healthcare executives, policymakers, and emerging scholars to share ground-breaking insights and shape the future of care for mothers and children.

Centered around the theme “Innovating Care from Womb to World,” the conference addresses the full spectrum of healthcare from fetal development and safe childbirth to the growth and well-being of infants and young individuals. The scientific discussions will highlight urgent global priorities, including advances in fetal medicine and prenatal diagnostics, neonatal intensive care innovations, pediatric diseases and vaccination research, maternal mental health, congenital and rare disorders, and the evolving landscape of developmental pediatrics. The summit also emphasizes the role of digital health and artificial intelligence in transforming pediatric and maternal care, and reflects on policy-making, ethics, medical access, and global health equity.

Over the course of two days, attendees will experience an enriching blend of keynote lectures, research presentations, expert-led workshops, roundtable dialogues, and clinical case discussions. Esteemed speakers from world-renowned medical and academic institutions will share the latest clinical evidence, emerging technologies, and forward-looking strategies that influence healthcare outcomes across generations. The conference will also serve as an outstanding platform for professionals to present their research, engage in insightful debates, participate in hands-on learning sessions, and gain international recognition for their scientific contributions.

Beyond academic excellence, the summit is designed to foster meaningful professional connections and collaborative opportunities. Participants—whether attending in person in Singapore or joining virtually—will be able to network with peers, explore partnership opportunities, and build long-lasting relationships that drive innovation, knowledge transfer, and sustainable improvements in maternal and pediatric health worldwide.
